The King’s Men (previously known as Collegium Regale and All the King’s Men) is the close harmony group formed by the Choral Scholars of King’s College, Cambridge. As Choral Scholars we sing daily chapel services throughout term as well as undertaking a busy concert and recording schedule, most notably the annual broadcasts of the Festival of Nine Lessons and Carols on BBC TV and Radio at Christmas, which reaches millions of people worldwide.

The King’s Men functions as a separate entity from the main choir and is run entirely by the members of the group itself. We mostly perform as a seven-man group, singing a varied repertoire from classical, to our own arrangements of folk, spiritual and modern pop songs. We sing throughout the year for many concerts, dinner entertainments, private parties, and other events. Recently we broadcast a live service for the BBC on Christmas Eve morning, and we sang at the 70th birthday party of the renowned scientist, Stephen Hawking. We also run master classes regularly at schools around the country, aided by our talented Organ Scholars, in which we coach young singers in choral singing, ensemble skills and close harmony performance.

The King’s Men are available to make your event one to remember by creating a specially tailored performance just for you.
